PREFACE

forming part of the language, I have included a certain number, such as ingrateful, livery (vb.), neglection, unsanctate, the meanings of which are evident, but which have become obsolete.

Quotations as well as references to the text have throughout been appended to the definitions. In the case of a work of this nature mere references are of little service, as, apart from the trouble and loss of time involved in referring to the text, there cannot, if references only are given, be the same facility of comparison, and of seeing how the use of a word in one passage throws light on its use in another, as is afforded by the passages being exhibited to the eye together. It has not been possible to make the references and quotations exhaustive; and in the cases of words and senses of frequent occurrence I have accordingly generally limited myself to three or four. Where not more than two are given it may, as a rule, be assumed that there are no other clear examples of the use.

The references are to the Globe edition, and for the quotations that text has been used. In printing the quotations the only deviation from the Globe text which I have allowed myself, in addition to a few mentioned in the body of the work, is the omission of the apostrophe in genuine aphetic forms such as gin, gree, long, and in a (=he). In a few cases, where a portion only of a sentence has been quoted, it has been necessary slightly to modify the punctuation. I have found that later issues of the Globe differ somewhat from the first issue, and have recorded one or two such differences which I have noticed.

The Works are cited substantially as in Schmidt's Lexicon. A table of the contractions used, which for the most part explain themselves, is appended. Small numerals attached to leading words indicate that the words so distinguished, although identical in form, differ in origin.

The following words have not, as a rule, been considered to fall within the scope of the undertaking—(1) Latin words and words in foreign languages; (2) the blunders and perversions of the illiterate characters and of such manglers of English as Sir Hugh Evans and Fluellen; and (3) proper names. Information as to the proper names is for the most part easily accessible in the usual Biographical and Mythological Dictionaries; but room has been found for a few—chiefly place-names—in regard to which it was thought that some difficulty might be experienced. In particular, the London place-names, in so far as likely to give trouble, have been briefly treated. Etymologies have seldom been given. It was felt that the place for these was rather in a general dictionary than in one dealing only with a single, and that not a very early, section of the literature, and aiming at presenting materials rather for an accurate exegesis of a particular text than for a historical study of the language.

I have aimed at helping those who wish to read Shakespeare in a scholarly spirit, with a full understanding of the sense, and at providing the means of forming an accurate idea of the extent to which the Shakespearean vocabulary differs from our own, and of the details of the difference. The Shakespearean language is, to an extent greater than is sometimes supposed, a dead tongue to us, and can be thoroughly mastered only by study with the aid of grammar, dictionary and comment. In the matter of grammar the student's needs are amply supplied; there is at his disposal a body of comment, of varying excellence, it is true, but of great extent; but there seems to be room for a dictionary on the lines of the present work, showing the results of a reconsideration of the vocabulary in the light of recent research. In particular the time seems to have come for a fresh treatment of the subject in view of the fact that the New English Dictionary, to which further reference is made below, is so far advanced towards completion. So far as I am aware this is the first work of the kind on a considerable scale in which the materials furnished by the Dictionary have been systematically drawn upon, and in which the scientific guidance to the treatment of the words which it affords has been fully made use of—a feature which may of itself be thought to entitle the book to some consideration.

In using a book of this sort difficulty does not arise chiefly in the case of words which are obsolete, or which, though they are still part of the language, are used in senses which are obviously unfamiliar. In to be got from the commentators for a work dealing so minutely with the text as this does is less than might perhaps be expected. The fact is that while some plays have been edited over and over again with varying degrees of philological minuteness, we still await an edition in which the whole body of the works shall be edited with full attention to a thorough exegesis of the text. Even in the case of plays which have been often edited, help from the commentators has not infrequently been found wanting.

Among books which have been drawn upon to a greater or less extent may be mentioned Douce's Illustrations, Hunter's New Illustrations, Lord Campbell's Shakespeare's Legal Acquirements, and Craik's English of Shakespeare (a commentary on Julius Cæsar). For the London place-names use has been made of Loftie's History of London and of Wheatley and Cunningham's London Past and Present.

In connection with the terms of art in Woodcraft, Falconry, the Manage and Coursing, special acknowledgments are due to The Diary of Master William Silence, by the Right Hon. D. H. Madden (Longmans, 1897), a work which is at once delightful as literature and valuable as a mine of information on all subjects connected with Elizabethan sport. It is undoubtedly the most valuable contribution to this aspect of Shakespearean study which has yet appeared.

I put last in order the work to which I owe most. No one engaged in a task like this can possibly afford to neglect the assistance of the New English Dictionary,* to which I have already referred. Words of commendation on my part would be at once superfluous and impertinent. I shall content myself with saying that my debt is very heavy and is very gratefully acknowledged. Only one who has systematically used the Dictionary in connection with some such work as this can fully know its matchless thoroughness and wealth of illustration, and appreciate the enormous advantage which its guidance gives to a compiler of these days. It is not too much to say that in very many cases the difference between then and now is the difference between groping in darkness and walking in daylight. For the portion of the alphabet not yet covered by the New English Dictionary some use has been made of the Century Dictionary.

* A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles; Founded Mainly on the Materials Collected by The Philological Society; Edited by Sir James A. H. Murray. Oxford, at the Clarendon Press. To be completed in ten volumes. Vol. I was published in 1888. With the exception of a small portion at the end of R, the Dictionary is now complete to Sau. Dr. Henry Bradley and Dr. W. A. Craigie have for some time been acting as editors along with Sir James Murray.

In using the materials I have endeavoured throughout to bring a fresh mind to bear on the problems arising, and, except of course as regards matters of fact, have in no case been content merely to record the opinions of others without examination. Even the august authority of the New English Dictionary has not always been followed. In consequence some of the explanations of difficult passages will be found to differ somewhat (I hope for the better) from those formerly given, while in other cases explanations are offered which do not appear to have occurred to previous workers.

My friend, Mr. J. B. Douglas, M.A., has very kindly gone over the proofs, and has made many valuable suggestions. I owe much to his scholarly care. For the references and quotations, however, I alone am responsible. All have been checked in proof with the text, and I have some confidence in their accuracy.

If the reader who makes the volume a companion to his study of the text finds that he is thereby helped, even in a small degree, to a clearer comprehension, and consequently to a higher appreciation, of the plays and poems, I shall feel that the not inconsiderable labour which the compilation has entailed has been well bestowed.

In this reimpression some corrections and additions have been made in the text, and some Addenda have been inserted at the end; but as the work is printed from stereotype plates it has not been possible to make any extensive alterations. An index to the first lines of the Sonnets, compiled by my daughter Mary Helena Cunliffe, will be found at the end of the book. Such an index must often have been desired; but hardly any editor has thought of providing one.

INDEX

To the First Lines of the Sonnets

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all, 117.
Against my love shall be, as I am now, 63.
Against that time, if ever that time come, 49.
Ah! wherefore with infection should he live, 67.
Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth, 103.
Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there, 110.
As a decrepit father takes delight, 37.
As an unperfect actor on the stage, 23.
As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest, 11.
A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted, 20.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend, 57.
Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan, 133.
Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took, 47.
Be wis .s thou art cruel; do not press, 140.
But be contented: when that fell arrest, 74.
But do thy worst to steal thyself away, 92.
But wherefore do not you a mightier way, 16.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not, 149.
Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep, 153.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, 19.

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing, 87.
For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any, 10.
From fairest creatures we desire increase, 1.
From you have I been absent in the spring, 98.
Full many a glorious morning have I seen, 33.

How can I then return in happy plight, 28.
How can my Muse want subject to invent, 38.
How careful was I, when I took my way, 48.
How heavy do I journey on the way, 50.
How like a winter hath my absence been, 97.
How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st, 128.
How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame, 95.

If my dear love were but the child of state, 124.
If the dull substance of my flesh were thought, 44.
If there be nothing new, but that which is, 59.
If thou survive my well-contented day, 32.
If thy soul check thee that I come so near, 136.
I grant thou wert not married to my Muse, 82.
I never saw that you did painting need, 83.
In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes, 141.
In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, 152.
In the old age black was not counted fair, 127.
Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye, 9.
Is it thy will thy image should keep open, 61.

Let me confess that we two must be twain, 36.
Let me not to the marriage of true minds, 116.
Let not my love be call'd idolatry, 105.
Let those who are in favour with their stars, 25.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore, 60.
Like as, to make our appetites more keen, 118.
Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch, 143.
Lo! in the orient when the gracious light, 7.
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest, 3.
Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage, 26.
Love is my sin and thy dear virtue hate, 142.
Love is too young to know what conscience is, 151.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war, 46.
Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd, 24.
Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly? 8.
My glass shall not persuade me I am old, 22.
My love is as a fever, longing still, 147.
My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming, 102.
My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun, 130.
My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still, 85.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead, 71.
No more be grieved at that which thou hast done, 35.
No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change, 123.
Not from the stars do I my judgement pluck, 14.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments, 55.
Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul, 107.

O, call not me to justify the wrong, 139.

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide, 111.
O, from what power hast thou this powerful might, 150.
O, how I faint when I of you do write, 80.
O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem, 54.
O, how thy worth with manners may I sing, 39.
O, lest the world should task you to recite, 72.
O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head, 148.
O, never say that I was false of heart, 109.
Or I shall live your epitaph to make, 81.
Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you, 114.
O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are, 13.
O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power, 126.
O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends, 101.

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, 146.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault, 89.
Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? 18.
Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea, 65.
Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind, 113.
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye, 62.
So am I as the rich, whose blessed key, 52.
So are you to my thoughts as food to life, 75.
So is it not with me as with that Muse, 21.
Some glory in their birth, some in their skill, 91.
Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness, 96.
So, now I have confess'd that he is thine, 134.
So oft have I invoked thee for my Muse, 78.
So shall I live, supposing thou art true, 93.
Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said, 56.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all, 40.
That god forbid that made me first your slave, 58.
That thou art blamed shall not be thy defect, 70.
That thou hast her, it is not all my grief, 42.
That time of year thou mayst in me behold, 73.
That you were once unkind befriends me now, 120.
The expense of spirit in a waste of shame, 129.
The forward violet thus did I chide, 99.
The little Love-god lying once asleep, 154.
Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now, 90.
Then let not winter's ragged hand deface, 6.
The other two, slight air and purging fire, 45.
They that have power to hurt and will do none, 94.
Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me, 132.
Those hours, that with gentle work did frame, 5.
Those lines that I before have writ do lie, 115.
Those lips that Love's own hand did make, 145.
Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view, 69.
Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits, 41.
Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art, 131.
Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes, 137.
Thus can my love excuse the slow offence, 51.
Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn, 68.
Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts, 31.
Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain, 122.
Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear, 77.
Tired with all these, for restful death I cry, 66.
'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd, 121.
To me, fair friend, you never can be old, 104.
Two loves I have of comfort and despair, 144.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend, 4.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse, 86.
Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed, 27.
Were't aught to me I bore the canopy, 125.
What is your substance, whereof are you made, 53.
What potions have I drunk of Siren tears, 119.
What's in the brain that ink may character, 108.
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow, 2.
When I consider every thing that grows, 15.
When I do count the clock that tells the time, 12.
When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced, 64.
When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes, 29.
When in the chronicle of wasted time, 106.
When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see, 43.
When my love swears that she is made of truth, 138.
When thou shalt be disposed to set me light, 88.
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought, 30.
Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long, 100.
Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid, 79.
Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy "Will", 135.
Who is it that says most? which can say more, 84.
Who will believe my verse in time to come, 17.
Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day, 34.
Why is my verse so barren of new pride, 76.

Your love and pity doth the impression fill, 112.
